DEVELOP ATTACKING OVERLOADS IN THE FINAL THIRD

46-P9 | FUNCTION

ORGANISATION

- This is a functional practice that focuses on developing attacking movements to penetrate in the final third.
- We have six attackers set up in a 433 and six defenders setup in a 4231 with a keeper in the goals.
- The attacking team starts with possession and must try to penetrate through the defenders into the final zone.
- Defenders cannot retreat back into this zone until the pass has been played through.
- If defenders win possession they can break to score in any of the two mini-goals.
- Coaches can stop play at certain points to show players positioning and the options they have available.

KEY COACHING POINTS SUMMARY

- Penetrative ball between the CB's to find strikers run in behind.
- Quick combinations to release winger in space out wide
- Wingers come inside for midfielders to make overlapping run
- Positional rotation between wingers and attacking midfielders
- Timing of the penetrative ball through - patience if no option is available

DEVELOP ATTACKING OVERLOADS IN THE FINAL THIRD

46-P9 | FUNCTION

KEY COACHING POINT 1

If defenders are drawn to the ball, have one attacker peel off behind. Deliver the ball in behind the centre-backs to penetrate the defensive line and create a clear goal-scoring opportunity.

KEY COACHING POINT 2

When the winger comes inside and passes to the striker, the midfielder moves into the space left wide, makes an overlapping run to receive behind the defence, and delivers a cross into the box for attackers to finish.
